About the Author ABOUT THE AUTHOR A student of nature and all that dwell therein, Liz Sartori appreciates and is grateful for her rural surroundings. She especially appreciates the American Goldfinch family that makes a home in her backyard in the spring and this year had two sets of fledglings. It was a delight to see the flashes of yellow in the branches of the aspen trees. The Western and Mountain Bluebirds that come in the spring, and this summer a Bullocks Oriole, were a delight and of course she feeds Black-Capped Chickadees, Black-Throated Sparrows, House Finches, Mourning Doves, Lazuli Buntings . . . oh, and all those little brown birds that compete with her chickens for their chicken feed!
