It is a wonderful reminder to have at all times but especially at those times when we are feeling low and perhaps rather unloved. The verses are taken from a variety of translations but regardless of which one used, the meaning comes through very clear we are deeply loved just as we are. The author gives background on how she came up with the verses and how we might use the book apart from merely coloring it. The focus of each design is the scripture. The words are surrounded by various elements to color but you will be looking first and foremost at the words. I noticed that the wording is in cursive writing which is very elegant but it reminded me that in most school curriculum these days, cursive writing is not being taught. Sadly, there will soon come a day when young people would not be able to read this book. In any case, the designs are very elegant and are printed on one side of very nice heavyweight white paper. The author has provided a journal page opposite each picture (on the backside of the preceding design.) The page is not perforated and some of the designs merge into the binding which might make it problematic to remove pages. I will not with this book as I want to be able to leaf through it and read all of the verses whether or not I am coloring that day. The paper is a really nice grade. I found that my permanent markers (Ultra-Fine Sharpies, Copics, and other alcohol-based) bled through easily but my water-based markers did a much better job. I had some shadowing with my Stabilo 88 but my Staedler triplus fineliners and the brush end of my Tombows dual brush did not bleed through at all (though again, with the marker end of the Tombow, there was some shadowing.) My gel pens did not bleed through but they did require extra drying time so that they wouldn't smear on the paper. I find that is true with most really nice grades of paper the gel pen sits on the surface rather than soaks in and needs to dry well. My coloring pencils went on thick and creamy. If I decide to use markers, I will put a heavy sheet of paper or chipboard under my work to keep the ink from seeping through to the next page. I own a lot of coloring books, but the Christian ones mean something different to me. I enjoy coloring in them but they also give me something to meditate on, to ponder, or to rejoice in. I am really thankful that Christian publishers are beginning to publish these books. 13 of 13 people found the following review helpful. I LOVE this absolutely beautiful coloring book so much that I ...By Cherie I LOVE this absolutely beautiful coloring book so much that I purchased an extra just to have on hand for a gift (and since I gave it away yesterday, I'm getting ready to buy another!). It's perfect for quiet reflection, decompressing after a long day, or even sharing valuable time with your children. So many of the adult coloring books on the market are "mindless," but Live Loved helps me dive into Scripture while exercising my creative muscles. Give yourself the opportunity to exhale or bless someone with a gift beyond measure. 10 of 10 people found the following review helpful. Nice for markers, not so much for pencils. By Tweet Lets start with I like. I enjoy the "Pray and Reflect" areas of this book. I found myself doing just that. I would look up the scripture, read the chapter and reflect while I was coloring. Which is exactly why I bought this book in the first place. Problem is I would say this for coloring with markers not pencils. The lettering is too close together and I didn't enjoy coloring it with pencils. I would like it much more if the lettering wasn't only in this cursive pattern that I find a little difficult to focus on and read. I purchased another christian coloring book from another seller that I LOVE you can clearly see why in the photo. The bold lettering is much easier on my eyes and the size it perfect for me.

From the Author How would my attitude, actions, and reactions change if I lived in the unconditional, immeasurable love of God? How would my relationships with others be impacted if I learned to allow God's love to flow to and through me? Would my capacity for joy expand if I learned to live loved? If I wanted to live loved, where would I begin? I compiled a list of Scriptures that revealed God's love. As I jotted down a few notes, I began to wonder, How have I lived my whole life as Christian and never sought God's love to infuse me like this? Shouldn't this be the foundation for my life? God, fill me with your love anew, I prayed. I want to live loved. I began spending 5 to 10 minutes each day marinating in the truth of God's love found in Scripture. I used the time to read, reflect, and even memorize passages that revealed the God's boundless love and ask God for His love to overflow in my life. I still remember that first morning. I set a timer suspecting 10-minutes might feel long, but the time passed all too soon. Reading through the promises of God's steadfast, enduring and unfailing love, my eyes became damp. I took a slow deep breath and exhaled in an effort to hold back the tiny water droplets. The response welled up like a wave and broke over my soul. These tears weren't stained by sadness; they were marked by joy. When I regained my composure, I realized the Scriptures exposed just how much I question and doubt God's love. On far too many days, God's love doesn't feel tangible or real. Though I often proclaim God's love to others, such divine affection often feels like it's for someone else, not me. Yet the passages revealed God's love is closer, more faithful, more present, than I realize in day-to-day life. The tears running down my face signaled that I'd been turning to other sources than God to receive love and answer my deepest heart questions. From the Inside Flap We live in a world where we're constantly pressed from demands on every side--from our work, our home, and our families. While many of those are good, if they stack too high, they can squeeze the life and creativity out of us. We can become too busy to slow, recalibrate, and pursue creative outlets. The Live Love Adult Coloring Book provides an opportunity for you to: *Spend time praying and reflecting to grow in your relationship with God *Commit Bible passages to memory to strengthen your faith *Marinate in the truth of God's fierce love for you to experience transformation *Express your love for God and the Bible through creativity *Strengthen relationships as you invite others to create alongside you *Share fun your artistry with others as you show others your work My hope and prayer is that through the upcoming pages, you'll unleash the creative talents God has given you. As you color and sketch, you'll whisper the words aloud, commit them to memory, and learn how to live loved in a tangible way.
