7 of 8 people found the following review helpful. Great game for two By Graham Sazama I'm a big fan of board games, and this one is very enjoyable. It's very similar to Stratego at its core, but with a lot more nuance when the character abilities and player cards are considered. In addition, multiple versions are included for a LOT of replayability, especially for a board game. It's only good for two players, so it's nice for a couple, and each game can take as little as 15 minutes. There's a slight learning curve, given the unique abilities for each side of the board, so a few plays are necessary to get a full understanding of the rules and to develop a strategy around them. I'm looking forward to my next chance to play this one! If you like board games, you can't go wrong with this one. 5 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Great game. By Northern_grl I can hardly believe I'm saying this, but I think it was worth $45. My 9 year old spent his own money on it (I paid the shipping), and he plays it all the time. It's quite complicated, but rewarding, like chess. 3 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Great Strategy Game By T Burton This game combines Stratego style planning with the need to deduce what your opponent will do in individual battles. Easy to learn. I took this game to Scott Camp camp it became an instant favorite among the boys.

The Lord of the Rings film trilogy, directed by Peter Jackson, gained acclaim for sweating the details. Every bit of costuming, set dressing, and dialogue was precise enough to satisfy notoriously picky Tolkein aficionados and also accessible enough to delight the general public. This two-player board game is nowhere near as intricate as other LOTR tie-in items, but the look is just as magical thanks in large part to illustrations by renowned Tolkein artist John Howe and a game design by Reiner Knizia. Players can either take the role of the hobbits traveling from the Shire all the way to Mordor or, because sometimes being evil is fun, assume the identity of Sauron himself on a mission to stop those pesky hobbits and reclaim the ring. The game takes about 30 minutes to play, considerably shorter than watching any of the films. --Charlie Williams
